

THE ACTION OF DRUGS ON THE RESPONSE OF MATTER*

SIR JAGADIS BOSE, F.R.S.

Editor's Note : This article is a reprint of the lecture delivered by Acharya J. C. Bose at Glasgow, Scotland on June 23, 1926 on invitation by the British Homeopathic Society. The lecture was recorded and was published verbatim in the journal 'Homeopathy' Volume V, No. 9, 295 (1926)

We are familiar with Bose's writings and scientific papers but are not too familiar with his speeches. This article reflects how remarkable his power of speech was and what a wonderful sense of humour he had. To the best of my knowledge, this article may not be available at any other place in India including Bose Institute, the temple of science he created. As it is a recorded text, the slides he presented during the talk are missing. But his presentation was so unique that the message is loud and clear even without the slides.

I am grateful to Dr. K. S. Srinivasan of Chennai, a life-member of ISNA, for kindly sharing this article with us. Dr. Srinivasan collected this article with great difficulty from his friend Mr. Michael Binnie who discovered the article in the Glasgow Homoeopathic Hospital and managed to get a copy. I would also like to thank Mr. Binnie for his effort in acquiring a copy of this rare article. Science and Culture is proud to reprint the article which, I am sure, readers will enjoy reading.
